It appeared from the later accounts which have been received that the identity of Dr. Jameson was not concealed successfully on the route from the landing to the Bow-street Police Court. In fact, when his boat appeared in the river and wherever

Dr. Jameson was seen on the route to Bow street the populace greeted him with vociferous cheers. The demonstration in the court itself was so enthusiastic that the chief magistrate, Sir John Bridge, was un-able to make himself heard. When a semblance of silence had been obtained in the court room he could still hear the shout-ing outside, and he announced that unless the noise was stopped he would clear the Judge Gregg looked down at Prosecutor Nippert in a questioning sort of way and finally, after some debate, the prosecutor stated that he had no objection to a reasonable reduction. Judge Gregg then formally reduced the bond from $5,000 to $3,000. Major Blackburn expressed his satisfaction at the result. The case was then continued

> Major Blackburn, with Rev. Wood, then hurriedly left the court, and Wood was taken back to his cell and later driven back to the jail. HABEAS CORPUS POSSIBLE. It is a startling fact, but nevertheless true, that Jackson and Walling are, in far as the Ohio authorities are concerned, entitled to their liberty. If their attorneys would press suits in habeas corpus the This will scarcely be done, for the prisoners are afraid of violence. It is an open secret that Sheriff Plummer is reluctant about taking the prisoners to Kentucky, for it is a mooted question as to whether if they are taken there, the law will permit their return to Ohio in case the Kentucky officials fail to find them guilty. If disnissed in Kentucky they could not be held again in jeopardy in Ohio for the same plan of procedure in the Jackson-Walling case was learned to-day. Although both men are on the Police Court docket Thursday, neither will appear there. It is said that on Thursday the men will be taken directly to the Common Pleas Court. They will be before Judge Buchwalter at the time their trial is set in Police Court. A Police Court officer will be sent to the Common Pleas Court merely to bear official witness to the presence of the men there. When this officer reports to Judge Gregg the cases against the supposed murderers of Pearl Bryan will be finally dismissed from the Police Court docket. The Common Pleas Court cannot decide upon the innocence or guilt of the men. will merely ascertain whether Sheriff Plummer's extradition warrant is correct Sheriff Plummer told a reporter that he had everything in readiness for the trial

When Colonel Deitsch, chief of police, Lieutenant Ross, formerly of the revenue cutter Corwin, has forwarded charges to reached his office this morning he sent for the Secretary of the Treasury against Cap-tain Munger of a very serious nature. The Chief of Detectives Hazen and for half an hour the superintendent and the big chief charges assert that Munger was drunk durdiscussed the theories and facts in the Fort ing most of the time the fleet was in Ber-Thomas murder mystery. Chief Hazen expressed the opinion that a bitter fight would be made in court against removal of the prisoners to Kentucky, and said the department had made every effort possible to get evidence. The advisability of postponing the fight as long as possible was

"I don't see the use of that," said Chief Hazen. "If we are going to have a fight over it, we might as well have it now as at any time." He then spoke as if he expected an effort on the part of Sheriff Plummer to remove the prisoners to Kentucky in the next twenty-four hours. When asked about this later he denied all knowledge of any such intention and said he only "guessed it" "guessed it." Colonel Deitsch spent most of the morn-

Colonel Deitsch spent most of the morning picking up the threads of investigation where he dropped them before his departure for New Orleans. "This man Jackson tells a straightforward story," he said. "I don't see how he could supply details as fully as he does if he was fabricating. Unless on investigation I find something to contradict the story I shall credit it."

This is the impression Jackson's story made upon a majority of the police. But ARRAIGNED IN POLICE COURT made upon a majority of the police. But Colonel Deitsch, like the rest, saw bare spots in it when he held it up for inspection a few moments later.
"I can't understand, though, why Jackson failed to mention what happened sooner. The natural action of most negroes laboring under the excitement and fright he was would have been to appeal to the police for protection as soon as he reached this side of the river. They would have stopped the first policeman in sight and told the story.

"I will try and find out as much as possible about Jackson's record and also whether his company drilled that night."

WILL WOOD'S DOWNFALL. Plain, Convincing Story Told by the Young Man's Sorrowing Father. CINCINNATI, Feb. 25.-The Rev. D. M. Wood, of Greencastle, Ind., father of William Wood, who is accused of complicity the case of Pearl Bryan, the murdered girl, makes a long statement in the Commercial Gazette in the way of palliating the share of his son in the crime, if not excusing it. He is thoroughly confident of his son's innocence, and has no trouble in convincing any one else with whom he talks for half

last week at Greencastle," said Mr. Wood, strated this morning, when he was quietly night. I presume it is continuing its labors driven from the fail to the station house in this week. I am sure it has been doing everything in its power to secure evidence against my boy, but as yet it has not secured a single thing. Nor will it. Sentiment has changed very largely in and about were some fifteen or twenty men and boys in | Greencastle regarding Willie's connection the court yard at the City Hall when the with the unfortunate affair. Fred Bryan patrol wagon drove in, but the big crowds is the bitterest of all against my boy, but why, I do not know. It was only after were lacking. Wood was locked up in the three or four weeks' urging on Pearl's part cell room until Judge Gregg opened court. That Will consented to take Scott out to Wood's case was the first called. His father, Pearl's home. Many young men of the the Rev. D. I. Wood, was already in court | town have come to me personally and assured me from what they knew of Miss any improper intimacy between them. The feeling is growing that Will was made a convenient tool by Jackson, and an intermediate friend, to go between her and Jackson by Miss Bryan.

Rev. Wood then told the story of how the acquaintance sprang up between his son and Scott Jackson, and of the boy's home life. It has never been published, and will be of interest. In substance, it was to the effect that when Jackson first came to Greencastle, last summer a year ago, he, with his mother, made his home at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Post. The Post residence adjoins that of the Woods, and no fence separates their yards. The Posts watered their horse at Mr. Wood's cistern, and, as Jackson cared for the horse, the were brought much together in the and stables. This condition lasted about three months, during the summer o 1894, and until Jackson left for Indianapolis to spend the winter. His mother accompanied him and lived with him there.

A "MOTHER'S BOY." Will Wood is the they son of Rev. and Mrs. D. M. Wood, and is less than twenty years old. The only other child is a daughget all the evidence it possibly can, and we | ter of twelve. Will was a model son. He was in the common acceptance of the term a "mother's boy." For the past four years his father has been away from home four days out of every seven, and 'Will staid about home, looking after the outdoor chores and assisting his mother about the house. He accompanied her to church and he would not have any other female company. Will is also a plano tuner, holding a certificate as such. He did a good deal of work about the town and at the college. Mr. Wood said he nor Mrs. Wood had ever heard Will swear, or knew of his drinking or seeking bad company. They knew he smoked, and considered that his only bad habit. He was tender and thoughtful about the home. Mr. Wood says even since the trouble he has not found any one who ever heard the boy use profane language. The coarse and profane letters written by his son to Jackson, and which he read in the Mayor's office, were, therefore, a revelation to him, and perfectly incomprehensi-

His Eastern record was not then known, and he managed to conduct himself with great propriety wailstaying in Greencastle. Neither did his escapades at Indianapolis ever reach the ears of the residents of the little college town. The Woods, therefore, had no thought of trouble growing out of the acquaintance that sprang up between Will and Scott Jackson. No suspicion of anything wrong

Upon his return from Indianapolis, last summer, Scott Jackson entered the dental office of Dr. Gillespie, who is a relative of Mrs. Wood, and of the Bryans. It was then near the middle of the summer. It had been agreed at the Wood home that Will's teeth needed fixing, and, by reason of the relationship existing, that the proper person to do the work was Dr. Gillespie The work was done, the bill amounting $18. There were teeth to be filled and others to be treated, so that but little was thought by the family of Will's spending a great deal of time at Dr. Gillespie's office, They know now that it was during those two months of August and September that the first seeds were planted that were soon to bring such terrible disorder to at least three of the best families in Greencastle. Mr. Wood has now learned that Scott Jackwas filling the mind of his only boy who had been reared as tenderly as a gir with the most vicious thoughts, and with the most licentious vagaries. He learned that that was the main trend of all the conversation, and that it was during this intimacy that Will first learned

He told a tender young heart, rob it of its purity ble, and the world would know nothing of the victim's disgrace. It was this sort of talk, Mr. Wood is certain, that brought his son unwittingly into unpleasant connection with Pearl's untimely end. He learned of Pearl's condition from Pearl herself. She had been sick, and Will had demanded to know what was the trouble. She told him she was in most serious trouble, and that Jackson was responsible for it. It was about this time that Jackson leffor Cincinnati. Pearl went to Will several times and begged him to write to Jackson and ask aim to do something for her. It was probably not without design that | fense, as the insurgents, whose headquarthe appearance of Dr. Jameson for arraignment was delayed all through the day. There was a disposition to hilarity manifest in the locality of the Bow-street Police Court from an early hour, and it was evident that there was a set purpose pervading the London masses to give "Dr. Jim" an ovation. The British authorities desire, as far as possible, to give no appearance of encouraging such e demonstration of approval of a citizen who has been handed over to them by a power against which he sought to wage war in the faith that Great Britain will see justice done to him, and will properly avenge the outrage done to a friendly power. But the British government is well aware that, though Dr. Jameson is brought to England for trial as a criminal, he is in the popular eye a hero, and his raid into the Transvaal, far from being viewed as a piratical enterprise, is looked upon as a chivalrous and knightly adventure to succor hard pressed friends and fel-

It was for this reason that the crowds about Bow-street Police Court were kept waiting and everything possible done to make a mystery of the movements of Dr. Jameson. It was hoped the ardor of his admirers would be cooled by the long wait, and that the noisy mob waiting to cheer him would grow weary and depart. But all this strategy was without avail. The people insisted on waiting. They grew impatient and somewhat irritable, to be sure, and many rumors circulated among them that they had been duped into coming to Bow street while the distinguished prisoner had been quietly smuggled into another court and there arraigned and quietly bailed. It did not take long, however, to prove the falsity of these rumors, and the crowd renewed its vigil with reawakened

ARRIVAL OF THE "HEROES." At 3:15 p. m. the faith of the crowd that they had not been waiting in vain was quickened by the arrival at Bow-street Police Court of a party of aristocratic friends of Dr. Jameson. Among these were the Duke of Abercorn, Viscount Chelsea, the Earl of Arlington, Colonel Stracy, private secretary to the Marquis of Salisbury, several Colonial Office officials, Mr. Charles E. Warde, M. P. and many other people of note. Many of these were shown to prominent places in the court room, which was thus made to present an animated scene during the period of the still further wait. As a matter of fact, it was quite late in the day before Dr. Jameson was landed at all. He was brought on a tug to Erith on the Thames, and was then conducted by a further roundabout and obscure route to Bow-street Police Court. As a conevening when he was finally driven up to the entrance of the court and brought in. The very noisy demonstration on the part of the waiting crowd outside, as they were scarcely aware that the prisoner was among them before he had disappeared into the court room. But his entrance to the court room was the signal for a remarkable scene. Evidently every one in the court room was of one mind in sympathizing with him. All were his friends, and all rose and uncovered upon his appearance, giving him hearty cheers. It was in vain that the court officers sought to quell the demonstration. The effort to do so seemed little more than cursory.

The charge lodged against Dr. Jameson and fourteen of his fellow prisoners was then declared to be "warring against a friendly state." After the charge had been read, Mr. Henry Matthews, Q. C., who was Home Secretary in the former Salisbury government, announced that, in view of the importance of the case, the law officers of the crown would conduct the prosecution. Formal evidence was then presented as to the circumstances of the arrest. The lawyers who were in court on behalf of the accused men asked that their personal recognizances be accepted for ball. A GRAVE CRIME.

Sir John Bridge, the chief magistrate of the Bow-street Police Court, from his place on the bench, said that before deciding on the bail, he felt that he ought to observe that in his opinion a graver offense could not be charged against men than that charged against the prisoners. It was a crime of the highest possible gravity, the magistrate continued, and it must be so treated by every one when they consider that the commission of such an offense might create a war between countries previously friendly. The circumstances of the present case, he added, were most peculiar. He felt satisfied that the prisoners would appear when wanted. He, therefore, accepted their personal recognizances and fixed their bail at £2,000, $10,000 each. Sir John Bridge then addressed the prisoners personally in a grave and serious vein. He begged them for their own sakes and for the sake of the good faith of the country to refrain from appearing where public excitement would be roused by their presence or in any way lending themselves to the Notwithstanding the seriousness of Sir

John's tone and the tenor of his remarks deprecating any public demonstration over the prisoners, the withdrawal of the defendants from the court room was accompanied by a renewed outbreak of cheering The court officers set about restoring quiet and by vigorous remonstrances finally suc-

John Bridge said sternly: "That sort of thing might bring the name of England into contempt." Meanwhile, a still wilder scene was being enacted outside the court room. The prisoners had been smuggled into the court room so unexpectedly and with such dexterity that the waiting mob was cheated out of their opportunity for shouting. But they were ready this time. Dr. Jameson's appearance outside the building was the signal for a wild outburst of cheering, throwing of hats in the air and a tremendous pressure to get up within reach of the popular

TARIFF BILL SHELVED AGAIN

MR. MORRILL'S MOTION TO TAKE IT UP DEFEATED, 33 TO 22.

WASHINGTON, Feb, 25 .- The Senate today again refused to consider the House emergency tariff bill. The debate that fol-Coloradoan and other silverites out of the Republican party. Mr. Sherman made a strong plea for an increase in the tariff so as to enable the government to continue business without borrowing money. After the Senate had disposed of much routine business, Mr. Allen offered a resolution for the appointment of James B. Lloyd, of North Carolina, as second assistant doorkeeper of the Senate. This speedily developed a sharp controversy. Mr. Sherman called attention to the fact that by an arrangement on both sides of the Senate, two young men, one satisfactory to the Republican Senators and the other to the Democrats, were appointed. It was needless, Mr. Sherman said, that another office should be created. Mr. Allen responded that as one official had been chosen to look after Republican caucus secrets and another for Democratic caucus secrets, it was most appropriate, in view of the proportions which the Populist party was assuming in the Senate that a Populist officer be chosen. There was considerable further discussion, but the resolution finally went over.

Mr. Morrill, chairman of the finance committee, immediately followed with his resolution to take up the tariff bill. Mr. Morrill began with a brief statement as to the complication on the tariff bill. He said it had been apparent for many months that there was a deficiency in the revenues. During every month since the present tariff bill went into effect there had been

"How was it before?" interjected Mr.

Mr. Morrill went on to state that the deficiency up to this time reached twenty millions. If we went on at the same rate, the deficiency would be thirty millions for the year. It was certainly manifest that Congress should do something to relieve the treasury and assist in the revival of business. Therefore, concluded the Senator, he moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the tariff bill.

The roll call proceeded with many interruptions, in order to allow Senators to pair. Announcement that Mr. Morrill's motion had been defeated-yeas, 22; nays, 23-was not unexpected, in view of the vote some days ago. The detailed vote was as fol-

MORRILL AROUSES TELLER The announcement of the vote was the signal for a remarkable colloquy between Mr. Morrill and Mr. Teller. As soon as the vote was announced Mr. Morrill again addressed the Senate. It was now evident, he said, that the Republican party was in the minority in the United States Senate. A chorus of derisive laughter came from the Democratic side of the chamber at this statement. Mr. Morrill, not noticing the interruption, proceded to state that in his judgment the tariff bill was defeated by a vote including five silver Republicans and six Populists. There was no substantial change in the present and former votes. It settled all questions of doubt. The Senator said the Republican members of the finance committee would be ready at any time before Congress adjourned to come to the relief of the treasury. "But as to this bill," concluded Mr. Morrill, I "do not think it would become me to ask any further time. 'Mr. Teller secured recognition as soon as Mr. Morrill concluded. The Colorado Senator spoke with intense earnestness and feeling, and at times a vein of sarcasm and bitterness was evident. He said: "The Senator from Vermont (Mr. Morrill) states what everybody has known to be a fact that there is not a Republican majority in this Senate and there is not a Republican majority in the Senate if those who have voted against the motion to take up this measure, made out of time and unseemly, who sit on this side of the chamber are in the party, which the Senator seems to think they are not. There is a motion here made by the Senator from Montana (Mr. Carter). who, I believe, has as much claim to called a Republican as the Senator from Vermont, to recommit this bill for defects in the bill-patent and apparent defects-defects which everybody who has read and ex-amined the bill understands. Mr. President, I charge here (and I shall undertake to make the charge good before this debate is over) that this bill was never introduced n either body nor has it been supported in this body with any reference to its becoming a law. It was not intended that it should become a law. Of that I shall speak at another time. If the Senator from Vermont thinks that he can embarrase us who have stood by the Republican party as long as he has, and as zealously as he has, because we do not agree with him upon every subject, he is entirely mistken. I vote against the taking up of this bill, as I shall vote against the bill, if my juigment dictates that I should, and I shall remain in the Republican party in spite of the suggesthe Senator from Vermont. It was when this bill was introduced of Representatives that it could Senate unless it had Democratic
